STANLEY ZINBERG, MD GIFTS EAST END HOSPICE $1,000,000 TO NAME FAMILY BEREAVEMENT CENTER

WESTHAMPTON BEACH: East End Hospice will rename its Bereavement Center in recognition of a recent $1 million donation from Stanley Zinberg, MD. The newly named Zinberg Family Bereavement Center offers individual and group therapy programs for adults and children navigating the loss of a loved one.

Zinberg and his late wife, Peggy McNally Zinberg, began supporting East End Hospice in 2009 and are recognized for their philanthropic support of several East End organizations.

“With his gift, Dr. Zinberg is leading the way in our community to address the unprecedented level of loss resulting from COVID-19 and support the growing numbers of adults and children who are navigating the loss of a loved one,” says Mary C. Crosby, EEH President & CEO. “We’re honored to recognize the Zinberg family and celebrate their more than a decade-long relationship with East End Hospice.”

“My family and I have been proud to support East End Hospice for many years,” shares Stanley Zinberg, MD. “We know personally and from the experiences of friends and neighbors that their care for terminally ill patients is impeccable. That they extend their services to families and individuals out in the community, as well as those whose loved one received hospice care, is to be commended. East End Hospice is a true community resource.”

Opened in 2014, the family bereavement center is an expansion of East End Hospice’s bereavement services which have been helping grieving adults, children, and families since 1991. In addition, the East End Hospice bereavement care team leads bereavement support groups across the East End, including the North and South Forks, at schools, educational workshops for the community, and comprehensive training for grief support facilitation.

Bereavement and grief therapy are not covered by most insurance plans. Many families cannot afford the often-significant cost of private therapy. Instead, they rely on community resources. Philanthropy ensures that any adult, teen, or child who may benefit from grief and bereavement therapy can access our services.

Since 1991, East End Hospice has been the leading and most comprehensive provider of end-of-life care for Eastern Long Island. Patients are cared for in homes, apartments, senior living facilities, or other places of residence in communities across Eastern Long Island. East End Hospice’s licensed, professional staff and 160+ dedicated volunteers care for more than 2,500 people each year. EEH supports more than 85 families managing terminal illness each day and offers grief and bereavement services to patient families and community-based clients.
